Dear Fellow PA Angus Breeders,

As we celebrate this Christmas season, let us not forget the reason. "Today in the town of David a Savior has been born to you; He is the Messiah, the Lord" (Luke 2:11). May you and your families be blessed this Christmas and in the entire New Year.

I cannot believe how fast 2023 has flown by. Beef demand continues to be at an all time high with cattle prices at historical levels. Purebred sales continue to be strong and it's a great time to be in the Angus industry. Inputs have been high too, with hay prices skyrocketing, but corn has softened significantly. Most of our producers were short on rain and some were in a real drought. Stock piles of hay don't exist for their winter feed needs. Be sure to consult with a good nutritionist on an action plan to keep your cows in top shape at the lowest cost possible. Don't skimp on feed, for this has a long-term negative effect on cattle production and performance.

The "Sweetest Show on Earth" is the theme for this year's Eastern Regional Junior Angus Show. The PA Junior Angus are the proud sponsors of this show, to be held at the Farm Show Complex, June 6-9, 2024. Look for more information in this newsletter and be sure to support and help our juniors with this great event.

Also, in this newsletter you will find information on the upcoming PA Farm Show, the PA Performance Bull Test, the PA Angus Spring Female Sale, the Breeders Show and annual meeting. Please take the time to read up and be informed about your organization.

Finally, this is our biannual membership year. Please fill out and send in your dues when you get this newsletter. That saves our secretary a lot of work. And, while you are at it, check and see if your neighbors and customers are members. If not, this would be a great time to invite them to join, or even GIFT them a membership.

I thank each and everyone of you for your continued efforts to make PA Angus among the best in the nation. If there is ever anything I or the board can do to help you in your business don't hesitate to ask. Our goal is to serve you, our members.

May you and your families have a Merry Christmas and a Blessed New Year.

I look forward to seeing you!
Dennis Byrne

Membership Dues Year!

The PA Angus Association has a biannual dues structure and the next dues cycle is upon us for the 2024 & 2025 membership years. To the right is a membership renewal form. Please complete this form and return it along with a check to Chris Jeffcoat.

When you join the PA Angus Association, total dues are $70 for a 2 year period. Dues are due in January of every other year. In order to save the Association money from sending out membership renewal letters, please pay your dues early before the end of January 2024.

This is a very inexpensive way for you to advertise your farm and keep your name in front of prospective buyers. Newsletters are mailed to members and available at industry events such as Ag Progress Days, Bull Test Sale, etc. The cost is $200 for 2 years (8 issues)!

As a member you will receive four printed newsletters each year, your contact information will be included in our membership edition of the newsletter, your contact information will be available on our website directory at www.paangus.org, you will be eligible to participate in state sponsored sales, and you will have access to an excellent community of Angus breeders throughout the state and region.

Angus Genetics, Inc. releases Functional Longevity research EPD

Now available in a research EPD format, functional longevity (FL) evaluates how long Angus cows stay in the herd and how many calves they produce.

The Functional Longevity (FL) research expected progeny difference (EPD) was released by the American Angus Association® for breeders on October 25. The trait's purpose is to help further characterize relevant maternal traits, which aim to increase the long-term success of breeders and profitability of cow-calf herds.

The Angus Genetics Inc (AGI®) research team, which conducts the breed's development of EPDs, leveraged the dataset from Angus Herd Improvement Records (AHIR®) Inventory Reporting as a base for FL. "I want to applaud the membership, because those data submissions on those traits that we needed have really ramped up," said Smitty Lamb, Association board of directors' member and AGI® board chairman. "You've allowed us to provide this tool."

At its most basic, functional longevity looks at not only how long a sire's daughters will stay in the herd, but also how many calves they will produce during their lifetime. The unit of the trait is number of calves produced by six years of age, with a higher EPD meaning on average sires' daughters are predicted to produce more calves by six years of age, compared to a lower EPD.

Kelli Retallick-Riley, president of AGI®, said she and her team are eager to observe how well the FL research EPD aligns with expectations. "We know members have been out there breeding cattle for generations upon generations, so their feedback will be important to hear as we continue to make this tool the best it can be," she said.

Brady Larson of Larson Angus Ranch, Sharon Springs, Kansas, said he has been looking forward to analyzing the initial research EPD results. He is enrolled in Inventory Reporting and his herd gained MaternalPlus® recognition. For his efforts, he and others enrolled in Inventory Reporting have first access to the FL research EPD. "We can learn from it and have better selection criteria in the future," he said. "I'm glad that a lot of these maternal issues are getting looked at, and I'm more than happy to keep turning in as much data as I can through MaternalPlus® to help."

A research EPD is a prelude to a production EPD. A research EPD does not get updated weekly but can be updated periodically as more data flows into the database. Once more data is collected, the evaluation will become even more robust, and the research EPD can be moved to production.

Andre Garcia, a geneticist with AGI®, said one difficulty with the FL EPD model was accommodating and using as much breeder-collected data as possible without sacrificing EPD accuracy. The low heritability of the trait also presents modeling challenges. "Some people may ask, 'Heritability is low, so what's the point?' but there is a point," Garcia said. "You're not going to make genetic progress as fast. However, as soon as you start, the more progress you can accumulate over time."

He encourages producers who aren't participating in Inventory Reporting already to submit their data. This helps ensure accurate EPDs across the board and contributes to the fine-tuning of FL in its initial research state and the production stage in the future. Garcia said genetic correlations between functional longevity and other traits are of interest and will be explored in future research, especially as more and more data is collected.

Larson admits it is a challenge to account for each animal and collect every recommended data point. Regardless, he will continue to submit data and utilize EPD tools as they are developed, because he said he wants to be part of the solution for opportunities he sees. "On the cow side of it, there's so much more that goes into it that needs studied and applied," Larson said. "I want to make the best cow that I can that will last a long time."

As a research EPD, FL will not be incorporated into the maternal weaned calf value ($M). Current research is ongoing to learn more about how the EPD could potentially play in $M when FL moves to a production stage in the future.

The research report for the FL research EPD is available at <https://www.angus.org/performance/documents/FunctionalLongevityResearchReport.pdf>.
